XANTHORRHOEA JOHNSONII

unique and super advanced drought resistant native trees

Xanthorrhoea johnsonii is one of 28 species of grass trees in Australia, and is best suited to climatic conditions in the ACT and NSW. They have a trunk that is typically black as a result of bush fires, hence the name "black boy", that adds to their visual impact.

Your purchase of these stunning trees from Provincial will enhance your outdoor space and give you years of pleasure. An impressive feature, your Grass Tree will add value to your home and lifestyle experience.

Did you know that in poor bush soil the trunk will only grow approx 9mm per year? So a tree with a one metre long trunk could be 100 years old! In better soils, growth is much faster and trees are more likely to grow multiple heads. So when you purchase your Grass Tree, chances are you're buying an heirloom item that has taken dozens of years to grow.

If you care for your Grass Tree well in the initial stages of transplantation from the wild, they are extremely hardy. Provincial will provide you with a document containing all the care and maintenance instructions you require to ensure your plants thrive.

Only a small number of reputable companies successfully transplant Grass Trees. Be cautious of who you purchase from as it can take many months to see whether a tree has been correctly transplanted. If treated inappropriately, its reserves will be slowly depleted, invariably leading to the plant dying. Provincial's Grass Trees are held over from sale for approximately 12 months after transplantation, or until they display strong root and new top growth, so you can be certain of avoiding transplant shock and that you're purchasing a quality plant.

You can select from Canberra's largest, healthiest and most beautiful range of Xanthorrhoea johnsonii at our Pialligo outlet. If ordering from interstate, Provincial are happy to provide you with images of plants via email.
